xbox.iso with 7Zip. Please help! I recently purchased an Xbox One and I would like to extract some files from my backup ISO file into it. I have a 2TB external HDD with 7Zip on it, and when I try to extract the ISO files, it says "Error loading folder contents." Can anyone help? Here is the code I used, as well as the error message I get. I have a 1TB external HDD and I tried to transfer my old xbox one game ISO to my new xbox one but it doesnt say in the iso whether it's windows 10 or 8.1 and it says that it could not find a disc image file. Can you guys help me with this. I have a 2TB external HDD with 7Zip on it, and when I try to extract the ISO files, it says "Error loading folder contents." I have tried to right click on it and see if there is an option to open it in explorer. I am currently on a windows 8 laptop. I have implemented a custom stream that is capable of doing so, and it works ok when it is the only stream at play, however, if multiple streams are reading from the same tcp/ip stream then the data is interleaved. I have traced the problem back to the fact that the original stream is consuming 4 or more bytes from the stream being inserted before returning those bytes, causing the in-coming data to be re-ordered. Am I correct in assuming that a tcp/ip connection is not a single stream, but is multiple streams? In addition, if it is correct, is there a way to force the stream to buffer more bytes before consuming them? A: No. A single TCP connection may have multiple streams, but these are separate and independent streams, which can be independent of one another. In addition 82157476af
